

SENATOR CLIFFE IS TALKED OF FOR THE LEADER OF SENATE

SENATOR FROM THIS DISTRICT
GETS HONORABLE MENTION.

CLIFFE HAS STRONG SUPPORT

Richard J. Barr of Joliet, Defeated for Attorney General, Also mentioned.

The Chicago Tribune publishes the following article which gives prominent mention to Senator Adam Cliffe, of Sycamore, who is senator from this district. Senator Cliffe is said to have excellent chances of becoming Republican leader in the state senate at Springfield. The tribune says:

Developments in legislative circles yesterday virtually clinched the speakership of the lower house for David E. Shanahan, but at the same time uncovered a merry row over organization of the upper house that may call for Gov. Elect Lowden's personal attention.

A quiet but determined movement has been launched by some insurgent Republicans looking to the retirement from floor leadership of the old guard, led by Senators Barr of Joliet, Dudley of Peoria and Corporation Counsel Ettelson of Chicago.

A meeting of the insurgents will be held in Chicago soon to determine a course of action and count noses.

The "scrap" it is admitted, will be confined to leadership of the senate,
and will not involve the working republican majority when it is settled.
Lowden is to have practically unanimous support of republican senators in carrying out state platform pledges.

Six for President Pro Tem.

No less than six tentative candidates for president pro tem of the senate, which carries with it the floor
leadership, have been put in the field.
They are:

Adam C. Cliffe, Sycamore.
Edw. C. Curtis, Grant Park.
Richard J. Barr, Joliet.
Tom Dailey, Peoria.
Morton D. Hull, Chicago.
W. H. Cornwell, Chicago.

The insurgents are inclined at present to back Cliffe for leadership. He is Gov. Lowden's next door neighbor and is said to be satisfactory to the governor-elect.

W. H. Cornwell and Morton D.
Hull are held in reserve by the insurgents if Cliffe doesn't develop necessary strength to win.

Trio Expected to Pool.

Curtis, Dailey and Barr are expected to pool their strength and will have the backing of Senator Ettelson
and city hall influences.

Some downstate men suggest that Barr be made president pro tem as a sort of consolation prize.
But there is determined opposition kept under cover so far against Etel-son and his friends gaining control of the upper house.

Several conferences are scheduled in Chicago next month to get things settled before the legislature opens
the first week in January.

A contest is also developing over minority leadership. Senator Al. E.
Gorman of Chicago, carrying Sullivan colors, is out for the honor and Walter I. Manny of Mount Sterling, who defeated Gorman before, is in the field again.

AMERICAN CAPTAIN IS PRISONER ON U-BOAT

Commander of Columbian Tells of His Experience.

Corunna, Spain, Nov. 14.—Captain Frederick Curtis of the American steamer Columbian, who arrived here with the rescued crew of this steamship, declares that he was a prisoner
on board the German submarine
U-49 for six days after the destruction of his vessel.

All of the 109 members of the Col-umbian's crew were saved. Captain Curtis stated. Captain Curtis said the Columbian was warned before she was torpedoed and sunk by the U-49. The crew was left in lifeboats and the captain was taken on board the submarine.

Captain Arthur Patterson of the British steamer Seaton says that he also was a prisoner on board the U-49 for eight days, during which time he heard the guns of the submarine in action and also heard distinctly the explosion of the torpedo which he learned later blew up the Norwegian ship Balto, soon after which Captain Yelousen of the Norwegian ship Ford-alen joined him in the narrow prison on board the submarine, where they were joined the following day by Captain Curtis.

BRITISH CAPTURE TOWNS IN WEST

BERLIN ADMITS LOSS OF POS-ITIONS CLAIMED BY GREAT BRITAIN.

(Associated Press)
London, Nov. 14.—Prisoners taken by the British in the Ancre section of the Somme front now number over 4,000, and the fighting continues.
The capture of Beaumont Hamel is officially announced.

Determined Efforts.
Redoubled efforts are being made by the Austro-Germans against the Roumanians. Reuter's Bucharest correspondent reports that powerful Ten-tonic reinforcements have been sent to Orzova on the Danube, where the struggle continues.

Germans Admit Losses.
Berlin, Nov. 14.—The stubborn defense against the British attacks near the river Ancre caused the defender's important losses. The capture by the British of Beaumont Hamel and St.
Pierre is admitted.

London, Nov. 14.—What may become known as the battle of the Ancre opened when the British forces struck a fresh blow against the German front in the region of the Ancre river. There had been no serious fighting in this sector since the opening of the British push July 1, when the British line of attack extended five miles north of the Ancre to Gemmeourt. But after a few days, no progress being made in this region, efforts were concentrated further to the south.

Apparently the Germans were taken by surprise, and they offered no serious resistance, except before Serre.
The attack was carried out over a front extending five miles on both sides of the Ancre against positions which the Germans had held for two years, and which they considered impregnable.

Over 3,000 Prisoners.
The sudden rush resulted in the capture of Beaumont-Hamel and Saint Pierre Divion, with a gain of new ground of a maximum depth of one mile and a large number of prisoners, between 3,000 and 4,000 having already been reported.

The positions north of the river are described as of extraordinary strength, Beaumont-Hamel equalling Thiepval in the extent and security of its dugouts.
The fighting continues north of Serre.
This latest British advance, in conjunction with that on the Schwabenline threatens the envelopment of Miramont, on the Albert-Arras railway.

In all the positions of the Germans
north of the Ancre there was a profusion of connected machine gun re-douits, elaborate telephone and electric light systems and great caverns capable of sheltering companies of infantry. Prisoners say it was believed Beaumont-Hamel could not be taken by the British.

Mackensen Caught in Rear?
London, Nov. 14.—A severe reverse, which may turn out to be an overwhelming defeat, dooming his army, is reported for Field Marshal von Mackensen in Dobrudja from Petrograd.

The exact meaning of the communication, which was relayed by wireless from Rome, is not clear, but its import bespeaks emphatic success for Russo-Roumanian arms.

That the Russians have crossed the Danube at two points south of Tchernavoda is the gist of the message. Of this there are two interpretations, if the announcement be correct.

Either the Teutonic-Bulgar-Turkish invaders of the Roumanian province have been hurled back to the south of the Constanta-Tchernavoda railroad,
the capture of the incursion into Dobrud-ja, or the Mackensen army has been caught in the rear.

Brilliant Victory for Serbs.
A brilliant victory has been gained by the Serbs and French on the western Macedonian front, according to a Saloniki dispatch. Continuing their pursuit of the retreating Bulgars and Germans in the Cerna bend, the entente forces drove the enemy back nearly two miles, capturing 1,000 prisoners.

The village of Iven, five miles north of occupied Poloz and ten miles within the Serbian border, was seized. The foe lost sixteen field guns, twenty-one cannons, and fourteen limbers.

Grant, Dixon.
Vice President—Rev. C. M. Irwin,

Secretary—Rev. R. V. Hinkle, Sterling.
Treasurer—Rev. Lebbeus Woods,
Dixon.

The next meeting will be held at Grace Evangelical church the second

Fifteen pastors attended the meeting and derived great benefit from the excellent papers presented. Rev.
L. Woods of the South Dixon Lutheran churches discussed "The Unsolved Ethical Problems of Today."
In a helpful and interesting paper.
Rev. Frederick C. Grant, pastor of St.
Luke's Episcopal church, gave the paper of the afternoon, "Prominent values of Primitive Eschatology," developed in a very thoughtful manner. Both papers were the subject of general discussion.

The severity of the weather made the change of dinner plans advisable
and instead of going to Grand Detour, the pastors took dinner at the Nachusa Tavern.

Secretary Der Kinderen of the Y.
M. C. A. spent Saturday in Chicago
with his sister.

DEMOCRATIC DEBT $300,000

National Committee Will Try to Make Up Deficit by Popular Subscription.

New York, Nov. 14.—The Democratic national committee is $300,000
in debt after conducting the campaign for President Wilson's re-election, according to an announcement from Henry Morgenthau, treasurer.
Morgenthau plans to raise $200,000
of this deficit through popular subscriptions in 2,000 American towns, the announcement said, and will raise the rest through appeal to various Democratic organizations.

G. O. P. CLAIMS THE HOUSE

Democrats Must Have Three More Districts to Control.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Democratic leaders admit that it looked as if there must be a shift in at least three districts before they could hope to control the house of representatives in the next congress.

Republicans still stick to their claims of 218 with two Pennsylvania districts in doubt upon which the two parties may divide evenly. The result there will be determined when the soldier vote is canvassed. If the Democrats secure both these districts, in one of which a Republican was elected on the face of present returns, they will still be short of votes enough to control the house.

BLIND PIG IS RAIDED; 2 KILLED, 6 WOUNDED

Deputy Marshal Green, North
City, Ill., One of Dead.

CHRISTOPHER, ILL., Nov. 14.

Two men are dead and six others
are not expected to live as the result of a shooting bee at North City, one mile north of Christopher between 11 and 12 o'clock at night in a raid of a blind pig. The dead are: Lester Gibson, deputy marshal, and William Kiser. The injured are all foreigners.

They were all taken to the Zeigler hospital, where it is said their condition is serious. It is said the injured men and a man by the name of John Nick had had trouble with the village authorities over alleged bootlegging joints and the trouble is said to have originated when Village Marshal William Green, attempted to take same girls from one of these places.

Nick, who resides at Benton, is said to have done most of the shooting. He is still at large.

ident John of the National Education al association was injured in a railroad wreck here today.

Neighboring Farmers Interested In Formation Of Cow Testing A

Considerable interest has been created among dairymen of this vicinity
in the meeting to be held at the city hall in Dixon tomorrow, when the organization of a cow-testing association will be undertaken. The movement has been started by County Agent L.
S. Griffith, who submits many figures from other counties where the plan has been tried to prove the association will result beneficially to members.

The meeting will be addressed by E. M. Clark of Urbana, a dairy expert
of the U. of I.

There are but four testing clubs in this state, with other states far in the lead, and all clubs have obtained excellent results. Land is becoming so high priced in this section farmers must abandon haphazard methods in handling herds, and make every cow
a money maker.
Thorough testing herds and determining the record and cost of rees-ing each animal, the question can be solved here as well as in Wisconsin and Iowa.
Wisconsin has 56 of these associations which have helped the state to gain its reputation as the home of fine dairy cattle. Illinois has richer soil than Wisconsin and there is no reason why her farms should not carry the finest and most productive herds in the world. The organization of a testing club in Lee county will be a long step toward attaining that end.

SENATE INQUIRY IN MONEY EXPENDED IN CAMPAIGN ASSURED

ADMINISTRATION OFFICIALS SAY
NEW CONGRESS WILL TAKE UP WORK.

G. O. P. WELCOMES INQUIRY

Chairman Wilcox Says Committee
Has Made No Important Changes.

(Associated Press)

Washington, Nov. 14.—That a senatorial investigation of the alleged misuse of money in the recent presidential campaign will be made was definitely stated today by administration officials.

Preliminary plans for the investigation have been made and a resolution will be introduced in congress
next month.

To Call Officials.

It is planned to call those actually in charge of the campaign finances before the senate committee to investigate details of transactions in various parts of the country. Several reports concerning the use of money
come to democratic as well as republican headquarters.

Charge Colonization.

The democrats charge that negroes
were colonized from southern states where the republicans triumphed by small majorities.

Evidence is being gathered to contest the election of Harry New and James Watson, republicans, in Indiana, and Representative Southerland
in West Virginia.

The contests if brought will be initiated by the new senate, which will have a democratic majority of 12.

G. O. P. WILLING.

New York, Nov. 14.—"The Republican National committee will welcome the fullest investigation of every penny spent by it," said Chairman Wilcox when informed of the proposed senatorial investigation. No charges of alleged misuse of funds by the democratic committee has been sent to Washington, he added.

CHANGE SCHEDULE I. C. PASSENGERS

The Illinois Central road has made a few slight changes in the time of table going into effect tomorrow. No.

A HOUSE OF CARDS

By M. Woodruff Newell

"Then I shan't stay to take any chances."

CELIA ARMSTRONG awoke suddenly. Confused with sleep, and with a sense that it must be nearly morning, she reached out for the tiny clock on the mahogany table, but the clock, ominously enough, had stopped.

Philip always wound the clocks. She slipped out of bed, and in the dim light of the one gas jet burning in her dressingroom beyond, she could see that the tiny hands of the timepiece pointed to three.

Three o'clock in the morning and Philip had not come home! He had not even telephoned.

The clock dropped noisily on the polished floor.

Little Jack, awakened by the noise, whimpered, his little soul frightened by the heavy stillness of the big house, and she went to him and comforted him.

Afterward she put on her bathrobe and slippers. There was a singing in her ears. Her pretty childish face was very white; her blue eyes very wide and startled.

Celia thought of a hundred things that might have happened to him. He had been called away suddenly on business; he had been hurt and carried to a hospital—yet, underneath all her surface fears, the real fear—the fear that had been growing from a tiny thing to a great bulk without form or substance for these many weeks, stirred her pulses sluggishly, then more insistently, until it seemed to rise up in her throat and almost strangle her. There was something wrong; there had been something wrong for a long time. Was she to learn now what it was?

Pushing back the heavy, velvet curtains she peered out into the street. It had been raining. A ghostly white fog veiled the houses across the road. A milk wagon went quietly by with a lighted lantern swinging at one side.

The electric light on the corner above flashed and died, and flashed again, showing little shining pools of wind-swept water in the smooth, black, deserted highway.

The world was asleep. Where was Philip?

These four years of her married life passed in review before her swiftly, like a moving picture. The two had been very happy together. Sometimes Philip had scolded her because she had wanted some extravagant thing, but always she had won by coaxing. She understood little of the value of money, and Philip had tried patiently to teach her.

"I am not rich like your father, I never shall be. I haven't the faculty for making money. You must learn to do without things—like I do on what I earn."

She remembered that she had sulked at that.

"I will ask father for some; he would—"

But Philip had turned on her sharply.

"You will never ask your father for one cent, Celia."

Yet finally he had always managed to get her what she wanted, the house they were living in, which he had insisted entailed too high a rent, the two maids, her new fur coat, the big dome in the library—how had he managed to do it? Her fear seized upon the question she had always evaded until now. It grew, and grew, and began to take tangible shape, like the horrible genie in the Arabian Nights tale that rose out of the fisherman's yellow copper vase.

Then a key clicked in a lock, and a second later Philip came in.

"Philip," she cried, and choked.

He drew back from her, leaning against the door. For many years after that she remembered that awful moment as they faced each other.

"It is nearly morning, Philip. I—I was frightened," she stammered.

"I came near not coming home at all," he said thickly, and he did not lower his voice.

She closed the door into Jack's room.

"I am broke, cleaned out. Fancher got suspicious, and they were working on the books a month before I knew it. If they prosecute, it means ten or twenty years behind bars. How do you like that?" his voice rose.

"How do you like that?"

Stunned, she heard him, without realizing a word that he said.

He did not look like any one she had ever known. His eyes were heavy and dull, his clothes smelled of smoke, and looked as though he had slept in them. His thick, brown hair was rough on his boyish head.

He pushed on, hotly.

"I could not keep up. I worked like a slave. I spent next to nothing on myself, but bills kept getting ahead of me. I would not beg of your father, so I fixed the books now and then, a little at a time, then more often. There are thousands doing the same every day and not being caught at it; but I am not clever. I am only a fool, an easy mark, and—"

"A thief," she whispered, understanding at last.

"Yes, a thief, but for whom did I steal?" bitterly. "What have I had out of it? The misery, that's all. I never shall be. I could not afford this house, but you got it, and everything else that you wanted. I never could deny you a thing, Celia. If you had wanted my heart of a soldier you could have had it, but you knew I was a weak, yes, but I had a son from I don't know, and I must not let you want for anything. That was my creed. I have kept to it, and now I pay. For myself, I am glad it has all come to an end. I have not slept decently for a year. If it wasn't for you, Celia—"

His lips quivered. He put out his hands boyishly, but she drew back.

"You, a thief!" she said again dully. "Is that all you feel? Celia—Celia!"

There was no response in her face, only fear and aversion.

"Then I shan't stay to take any chances. Your father will take care of you and Jack. I've failed. If I should ever be able to cover it and start new, Celia, somewhere else—"

But her face did not change. He opened the door.

"I see. We are through. I will never bother you any more. You came too high for me. I should have known, but I didn't. Kiss the boy—"

Then he was gone, slamming the outer door so hard that little Jack awoke and cried.

It was summer before she was well again, and could listen to her father's ultimatum.

"We want you here, daughter, you and Jack. What I have is yours and the boy's, but not Philip's. I do not know where he has gone, and I do not care. The defalcation is about four thousand. Fancher, to my surprise, has considerable sympathy for him, her father's voice was grim, "and will probably not push the matter. But, as far as you are concerned, it is finished. Next year, when the scandal has died out, I will apply for a divorce for you."

"No," Celia said stubbornly.

"Why not?"

She could give no reason.

"No," she repeated, and though he cajoled and threatened, she would not agree, and at last the subject was temporarily dropped.

Even to herself she could give no reason. She seemed to be curiously changed these days. The house was not home to her any more. She tried to make herself fit in as of old, but she could not, though she made desperate efforts. She seemed to have outgrown her old ideas. Her mother's showiness irritated her. Her father's prosperity and riches angered her.

The tragedy of Philip's homecoming that night, his flight, and the fall of their house of cards had awakened her sharply. Every word that he had said was vividly before her now, hour by hour. She could not get away from them.

The summer dragged into autumn, the autumn into winter, the winter into spring again. Gradually, out of loneliness, and misery, and longing, the soul of Celia, the wife and mother, was born anew. She could see clearly where she had tangled the thread of her life and Philip's; where she had taken advantage of his love for her, of his boyish weakness, and betrayed him for her selfish vanity, for childish tinsel, and glittering, worthless baubles.

But it was too late now. She had made him a thief and an outcast. He would never come back now to face her father. Perhaps if she were by herself he might come, but never here in her old home.

She began to want him with a love that she had never known before. She began to feel the bond between them, stronger now that they were apart than it had been when they were together. Above all, she was Philip's wife, and Jack was his son. In their foolishness they had made mistakes, he and she; but hers was the greater transgression. Yet she had sent him away without a sign; she had deliberately put the world between them.

The day that it became clear to her, Jack was playing with a new electric railroad in the room beyond, as she called him suddenly.

He came romping into the room.

"Would you like to live in the country, little son?" she asked.

He shook his curly head.

"Can I take my railroad?" he asked doubtfully.

"Perhaps."

"And my wheel?"

"Perhaps."

"Grandpa is going to give me a pony in the spring, he said so."

She took him up into her lap, seeing suddenly just where she stood.

Even Jack was learning fast that he must have everything that he wanted. He was not a poor man's son, Philip's son—he was a rich man's grandson. Philip had lost his son as well as his wife.

Blindly now she began her search. For weary hours she walked the crowded streets, her heart in her eyes. Often a gesture, an expression on some passing face, startled her weakly, but it was never Philip. Perhaps Graham Fancher, Philip's employer, might know, but she was ashamed to go to him.

One desolate day she met Agnes, the maid of whom she had been fond, and they talked together a long time. Agnes was married now, and evidently quite content.

"He does not earn much," the girl said simply, "but we do not mind. He is a good boy. The rent is small out in Kensington and cheap, but the country is growing green, and it is lovely."

"May I come to see you?" Celia asked abruptly.

Agnes Johnson grew a rosy red.

"I'd be glad to have you," she said. Celia went eagerly, and there she learned the rest of her lesson.

Agnes' three small rooms were tidy and clean. The good, brown bread was wholesome and sweet. Low wages and high prices on necessities made life a hard and dull thing, but love and companionship added the rose, and the gold and the glory.

Two weeks later Celia settled herself and Jack in the cottage next to her former maid's. A tiny income of her own, left by a dying grandparent, would not allow of much furnishings, and Jack cried himself to sleep for three nights because the rooms were cold, and there was no deft, patient nurse to untie his strings and unbutton his buttons.

Her father had grimly given her six months to grow tired of her whim; her mother had given her even less. Celia could not have explained her reasons to them if she had tried. They were too complex.

She had only a blind feeling that now she was where she should be as Philip's wife—living in humility and poverty. Philip's child must be brought up as a poor man's son. He must learn to do without, even as she resolved to learn.

Perhaps some day—though she tried desperately to keep the hope down—Philip might come back. He might forgive her and realize that she was trying to undo the mistakes of the past. But she could never undo them, though she endured patiently. That must be her punishment.

At first Agnes helped her, doing the heaviest of the work, but after a little she dispensed even with this.

Sometimes she was so tired that she could not sleep. Sometimes she was so homesick, so lonely, that the silence of the tiny house almost threw her into a panic; but with a grim tenacity which she had never known before, she held blindly to her purpose.

The red sheen of the maples, and the warm yellow rays of the sun at last dragged June out of her hiding place. Agnes' good husband had made Celia a small garden.

There were potatoes, and turnips, and cucumbers, and squash, and corn, and in one corner a happy group of larkspur, and hollyhocks, and golden glow.

As the sun got more power that garden grew and grew, each new bit of green bringing its own message to Celia's re-born soul and clearer understanding.

Jack went wild over it all—from potatoes to golden glow—learning the name of each growing thing in the morning and forgetting it again by night. Mother and son used to stalk around it in solemn triumph together just before Jack's bedtime. One night he had fallen asleep on the last lap, and Celia was carrying him—big boy as he was—his yellow head in the warm hollow of her arm, when Agnes came running over.

"Are you here?" she called.

"Why, yes," Celia answered in some surprise.

Then she saw Philip, standing where Agnes had stood, tall, and gaunt, and pitiful.

"I was afraid to come—I was ashamed, but Agnes said—"

The man's voice broke and she ran to him, and he took them both into his arms—mother and child.

Celia shut her eyes, and opened them again slowly, lest the dream melt into thin air.

"I have made up some of the money now, Celia. Fancher has been as good as gold. I have been working in his Boston office for two months—but I was so homesick for a sight of you—Celia, Celia—"

"I have learned lots of things," she said brokenly. "Oh, how I hated myself when I saw what I had done to you! It was all my fault, Philip—I know now, I know now."

"Hush, Celia, there was no excuse for me—"

But she smiled at him through her happy tears.

UGH! ACID STOMACH SOURNESS, HEARTBURN GAS OR INDIGESTION

The Moment "Pape's Diapiesin" reaches the stomach all distress goes.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapiesin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief some times—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapiesin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapiesin" comes in contact with your stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

So now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of "Pape's Diapiesin" from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

Including the sum made by the banquet, $1,700 was collected, which was about $100 more than was expected, and everyone feels quite jubilant over the success. At the banquet many were turned away as there was seating room for but 250. An enjoyable program of speeches and music was given in connection with the banquet. Dr. Murphy, the Hon. SOME STARTLING FIGURES

Startling figures showing the number of persons killed by firearms in the United States during 1915 have just been issued by the census bureau. 7994 persons died by firearms during that year, in the so-called registration area, which contains approximately 67 per cent of the total population.

On the basis that the same number of deaths due to firearms occurred among the other 33 per cent, not covered in the registration area where the government gathers mortality statistics, some 11,931 persons were killed by firearms during the year 1915 in this country.

The death rate by firearms was 11.9 per 100,000 population, the census bureau reports. In the registration area where the total number of such deaths was 7994, 3698 were suicides, 2885 were homicides and 1501 were accidental.

Perhaps the most appalling of these figures is the number of homicides. This is rated a civilized and law abiding country. But when it is known that 2885 were killed by others who shot them down with firearms in an area containing only 67 per cent of the entire population during a year, it seems as though the laws and police protection must be inefficient. Taking the same percentage for the entire country, it is estimated there were no less than 4396 homicides by firearms during 1915. That there were hundreds of homicides in which firearms were not used must be true beyond a doubt.

Owing to the fact that no complete records are kept in this country to show the number of murders and executions following them, it is not possible to state absolutely how many persons pay the life penalty for crimes. But it is possible to estimate these figures with considerable accuracy, and the number of murderers who escape justice is so large in comparison with those who suffer the death penalty or imprisonment as almost to put a premium on murder in this country. It appears to be far less dangerous to kill a man than to fly in an airship or attempt some of the other more or less hazardous sports.

The number of persons who have paid the death penalty for murders in this country in recent years has ranged from 100 to 120. The number is so ridiculously small in comparison to the number of murders that the belief is aroused that something wrong must exist in the machinery of the law and the police of the country. Compare these figures with those carefully kept by Great Britain or Germany before the war broke out and the difference is startling in favor of the older countries. In Great Britain there have averaged some 150 homicides per year recently, and the number of persons to pay with their lives for the taking of the life of another has been about 100.

A REPUBLICAN COUNTRY

Even though the final accounting may show President Wilson has been returned, the election has demonstrated that the United States is a republican country. In state after state that have given their electoral vote to the president practically all republican candidates for state offices have been chosen by imposing majorities. The "solid south" is all that has saved the democratic party from dissolution long ago and had even a small part of that section voted its sentiments instead of prejudices this year Mr. Hughes would have been elected decisively, says Bloomington Pantagraph.

The democrats were never more confident of a sweeping victory than this year and there were reasons for this optimism. General conditions overwhelmingly favored them. There was the party in power, an advantage of large proportions. With all Europe engaged in the bloodiest war in history they were able to capitalize peace conditions in this country. With the war prosperity at its height they could go before the country with the plausible but fallacious argument that such prosperity was due to democratic policies. Added to these circumstances was the division of the republican party four years ago. With such conditions to contend with it is remarkable that the republican party gave the democrats one of the most tremendous battles in American history. Even the democratic New York Times is marvelling over the strength shown by the republicans. It says: "The marvel of it is that the republican party has been so completely reunited after the disastrous division of 1912. The rapid and complete healing of so dreadful a wound is without precedent in our politics." Truly it may be said that President Wilson was born under a lucky star. He became president not because the people of the United States believed in democratic policies but because the republican party was divided. He received a smaller popular vote than any democratic candidate in 16 years. The first year and a half of his administration showed an unmistakable tendency toward general depression. Then came the European war with its abnormal effects on the United States. If there had been no European war the democrats would have been deprived of their specious arguments in this campaign. With the republicans as aggressive as they proved to be, how many electoral votes would Wilson have received this year had it not been for the European war?

If President Wilson is re-elected, however, he will be entitled to all the glory of success regardless of the conditions that brought it about. He will be the first democrat since Andrew Jackson to have been elected for two successive terms and should he serve his full time, the first president since Grant to have occupied the executive chair for eight full years. It is not surprising that democrats who remain strictly within party lines enthrall over President Wilson.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT.

Now that the election is over, Lee county might devote some careful thought to the subject of better roads. A bond issue, which will provide enough funds to build all the main roads in this country at one time is the only solution, as we see it. We also believe that the people of Lee county would be only too glad to vote in favor of such a bond issue. Everyone would benefit. The tax payer who would stand the cost, owns property and he would be the greatest receiver of benefits. Other counties in Illinois are getting the start of Lee.

JOHNSON ATTACK LIE, ROOSEVELT

Colonel Denounces Story That He Criticized Governor.

PRaises LATTER'S LOYALTY

Bull Moose Leader and George W. Perkins Take Hand in Bitter Dispute Over California—Newspaper Story That They Blamed Governor Johnson for Hughes Failure Is Denounced.

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—Theodore Roosevelt and George W. Perkins have taken a hand in the bitter dispute between the Progressives and the old guard factions of the Republican party within the state, as a result of the plurality given Wilson over Hughes, deciding the national election's outcome.

Roosevelt and Perkins wired to Chester Rowell, Progressive leader, Johnson's right hand man, Republican national committeeman and chairman of the Republican state central committee, denials of a published report that Roosevelt was incensed at Johnson's failure to win California for Hughes while he himself won two to one for the U. S. senate.

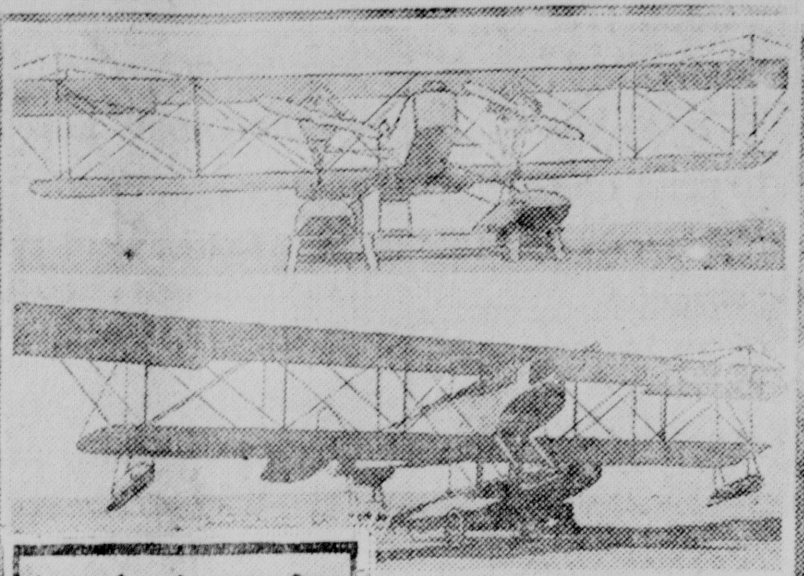

Roosevelt Extols Johnson's Loyalty. Roosevelt's wire said: "Mr. Perkins has shown me your message. The report is a preposterous falsehood and I yesterday wrote the editor of the New York paper which I think is probably responsible for the story, that it is a mischievous and sensational untruth without the smallest particle of foundation. I suppose efforts will now be made by scoundrels or fools or mere sensation mongers to spread abroad such falsehoods and other similar falsehoods. I have just heard from Peter Clark MacFarlane of the Governor's continual eloquent appeal for Hughes and his kindly references to myself in his speeches during the great campaign he waged. The effort to make trouble between the governor and myself is doomed to ridiculous failure."

GRANDMOTHER'S MEDICINE

Our grandmothers were wise in the virtues of the herbs of the field. They used to gather and store roots and herbs and use them to cure the ailments of their families—wormwood, thoroughwort, sage, rue, camomile—the list might go on and on of the healing plants with which they made us familiar.

Now their grand-daughters get the extracts from just such good old roots and herbs from the nearest druggist, ready prepared for use. One such medicine, which women find best for their own ailments, is the well known Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

MAMMA! DON'T YOU SEE YOUR CHILD IS SICK, CONSTIPATED

Look at tongue! Move poisons from liver and bowels at once

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine Askon. Second to the Holy Book does your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of Uncle Tom's Cabin rank as a sacred "California Syrup of Figs" then look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Co."

CUPID WINGS FRAT STUDENT

George W. Stoddard Weds Terre Haute Girl After University Dance.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., Nov. 14. Dan Cupid was an uninvited guest at the annual fall dance of Delta Tau Delta fraternity at the University of Illinois. The little fellow shot his barbs at two of the party, George W. Stoddard and Miss Marion Purvis of Terre Haute, Ind., whom the young man had "imported" for the affair.

Cupid's aim was evidently good for Sunday George accompanied Miss Purvis to Danville, from whence the following telegram was sent to the boys at the frat house: "Marion and I were just married; expect congratulations of the brothers. GEORGE."

DRINK HOT TEA FOR A BAD COLD

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus driving a cold from the system.

Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.

RUB BACKACHE AND LUMBAGO RIGHT OUT

Rub Pain and Stiffness away with a small bottle of old honest St. Jacobs Oil

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a 25 cent bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right into the pain or ache, and by the time you count fifty, the soreness and lameness is gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil needs to be used only once. It takes the ache and pain right out of your back and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica and lame back misery so promptly!

OPERA HOUSE.

In Xmany respects Wm. H. Kibble's "Uncle Tom's cabin" is the most important of the season's productions. In the first place it serves to exploit the masterpieces of two of Europe's noted artists, ie, Ralph Brunst's elaborate painting entitled "The Celestial City" and Kartz Verion's picture of the New Orleans slave mart; and secondly it has brought back into prominence the memories of that grand old lady, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and serves to reveal the beautiful lessons really to be learned by careful attention. Second to the Holy Book does the story that was instrumental in making our country religious, free and happy. Like a poorly composed book, there are many versions of Uncle Tom's Cabin now being forced upon the public under embossed covering, which are detrimental to the greatest

MISS SHARPLEY; NAME TELLS ALL

Woman Wanted In Chicago a Second Cassie Chadwick.

116 YEARS IN PRISON DUE HER

Chicago Poulterer for Smart Set to Tune of $81,000 Has Served Two Terms Behind Bars—Last Crime Before Duping Chicagoans Was Raising Postal Orders.

New York, Nov. 14.—Miss Annie E. Sharpley, who has been termed a "second Cassie Chadwick" is in New York and with only a $5 bill to her name.

Nevertheless, federal and private agencies' search for her was fruitless. The investigators wish to question her about her involved business affairs in Chicago.

The woman borrowed $81,000 on no other security than her personality and ingenueness, lost in various business ventures, and disappeared. Mrs. T. B. Blackstone, a woman of wealth in the western city, was one of the many who gave her money.

Something of the woman's history—revealed following her hurried departure from Chicago—has spurred on the search. She is said to be the same Annie Sharpley who made thousands of dollars in 1903 by "raising" postal money orders.

Has Name in Many Cities. In Philadelphia alone she fleeced various hotels and individuals out of $31,000. She operated under her own name and also under the following aliases: Susie Laurans, Jennie Robertson, Emma Jackson, Mamie Sutton, Rose Woodruff, Edith Mapleson and Anna R. Thomas.

Records of the local postoffice inspectors show Annie Sharpley has a record in nearly every city in the east. Her motherly appearance aided her.

Before leaving Chicago, the woman told her lawyer that she had been blackmailed for years by a former sweetheart with whom she had an early romance in Glasgow, her native city. She said his hounding even extended across the Atlantic.

In Chicago she first came into the limelight as a raiser of fancy poultry for people of wealth on the North Shore. She said also that she was the author of a drama which Belasco was to produce. It was called "Lights Ahead," and was a barnyard drama.

Served Two Terms in Jails. According to federal records she has served at least two terms in eastern jails. U. S. Judge Adams released her under suspended sentence in this city on April 25, 1905.

Two years before she had been arrested by Postoffice Inspectors Jacobs and Meyer for "raising" money orders in Philadelphia. At that time she lived in a lodging house on Fulton street, Brooklyn. Search for her in this neighborhood has so far been unavailing.

The police record goes back to 1898 when she was working as bookkeeper for a paper hanger named Russell. She speedily made the acquaintance of customers and induced a man named McConnell to mortgage his home and advance her $2,600 to go to a land improvement scheme. The property was only on paper.

Before this was discovered, she convinced several business men that through politicians in the tax offices in Philadelphia, she could get certain houses at a big sacrifice under city foreclosure proceedings. She obtained $6,000 by this means.

116 Years in Prison Due. She dropped from sight for two or three years. Next she was heard from when she began prosecuting her scheme of "raising" $1 money orders to $100. She made tens of thousands in this way and was in a fair way to become extremely wealthy when detected.

Before her first jail sentence it was figured out that she would be forced to serve 116 years in prison if all complaints against her were pressed. Instead she served only two years in the Pennsylvania state penitentiary.

In Pennsylvania Prison. Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—Annie E. Sharpley, alias Minnie Clarkson, alias Charlotte Cross, et al, was arrested in New York Aug. 4, 1903, for altering money orders in New York and other points and was held in $2,500 bail for removal to Philadelphia. She was indicted Sept. 1903, at Philadelphia, pleaded guilty Sept. 21, 1903, and was sentenced the same day to two years in the eastern penitentiary.

British Flyers Shell Teuton Fleet. London, Nov. 14.—A squadron of British naval airplanes dropped a large number of bombs on German naval works in the harbor of Ostend and on war vessels there, according to a British official statement.

Halts Toothpick Payment Wager. Washington, Nov. 14.—The police held up one election bet payment here when Munn Cannon, George Washington university student, rolling a peanut with a toothpick on Pennsylvania avenue.

Aviator Dies in Fall. Buenos Aires, Nov. 14.—While Pierre Macho, an aviator, was making a flight with a passenger, his machine fell. The aviator was killed and his passenger injured.

THE RETURN OF THE PRODIGALS. Life in the city is coming more and more to seem an unnatural exile, particularly to the country bred, at whose heart-strings boyish memories of farm and orchard, of wood and stream, tug appealingly, making pictures to the inner eyes as of lost paradises as they sit imprisoned in their palaces, slaves to the telephone and the ticker. More and more such men are planning to escape, vowing to themselves that they will rest satisfied with the modest competence rather than the big fortune, so that they can full out while they still have some youth left, and be boys again in the old countryside, fish the old streams, and go coon hunting in the old woods.

I have for neighbors one or two such returned prodigals, men who have come back to the great sweet mother, and our talks together, as we compare notes sometimes on birds and beasts and other country matters, are a revelation of the eternal boyishness at the heart of men. They are men who have the handling of what are called large interests, but these have no place in our talks. The really important matters are how the birds are coming back this year—the unusual number of grackles and bobwhites—the fact that a Baltimore oriole has rested in the neighborhood in So and so's garden (the glow over it as though the fact were a personal distinction.) Did you hear the owls last night? So and so counted as many as eleven blue cranes standing in the marsh at the side of his house. And did you hear of the deer and its doe that had strayed out of the woods into some one else's garden and eaten all the young corn? The delight of the individual whose garden had thus been honored, as quite beautiful.

Early in the spring, about six in the morning, I came upon one of my neighbors, a prominent real estate man in the woods. I could scarcely believe my eyes. He was gathering dogwood! He blushed like a girl, to be caught at it. No wonder. We are all so ashamed of our innocence. Here was a prodigal returning indeed. He told me that—except once or twice as a matter of business—he hadn't seen the dogwood for twenty years; and then he went on to talk about the woods and the spring like a poet.

For a man who has been exiled in the city for a number of years, having during that time had no more intimate acquaintance with nature than to be snatched in his annual holiday at some fashionable beach or some luxurious hotel in the mountains, for such a one to watch the coming of spring day after day in a stretch of old woodland is to come as near to the recapture of youth as is possible in a world whose one irremediable sorrow is the unescapable doom of growing old.—Harper's Magazine.

GROW, BUT DON'T SWELL. It is well for you to have confidence in your ability, but when it reaches the stage of "swell-headedness" your value to yourself or to anyone else begins to dwindle.

"Some men grow" with responsibility; others merely "swell." The man who swells has ceased to grow.

He has reached a place where he thinks he has all the knowledge he needs, and naturally all growth is retarded.

The best way—the most convincing way—to prove one's capability, is by actions, not words.

It is the man who does things in a quick, intelligent manner who wins.

Such a man will be found at the top because he deserves to be there.

All concerns want him because he not only accomplishes much as the result of his concentrated endeavor, but his influence is good on the other employees.

Save the exertion it takes to tell what you can do, and use it in performing your tasks. In this way you will get so much consideration eventually that you will not be tempted to brag.

People who are always looking for trouble are never satisfied when they find it.

And many a man ruined his eyesight sitting in a saloon looking for work.

Procrastination is the thief of time—and the plunder cannot be recovered.

When a man is going down hill he meets a lot of his neighbors going up.

If a man has a true sense of humor he knows when not to get funny.

And many a dear girl makes the mistake of marrying a cheap man.

A pretty girl finds nothing but pleasant reflections in her mirror.

If a man has money his funny stories will always get a laugh.

The man who tells you he is no fool may merely be mistaken.

To have what you want is wealth; to do without is power.

If it mightn't always make right it seldom gets left.

Hope induces a man to do a lot of fool stunts.

Gallons of trouble may come out of a pint flask.

Most people who say but little talk too much.

THE FAULTFINDER

The world's greatest nuisance is the faultfinder, for he is conspicuous everywhere. He does not hide his light under a bushel nor speak in a whisper. His mission is to be seen and heard.

The Creator in six days made the universe and when it was finished declared that the work was good. Yet, since its creation, the world has been full of fault finders who do not think it is good enough for them.

The peculiarity of the habitual fault finder is that he has no reason to find fault. He disturbs the serenity of those who are happy and who would enjoy peace and contentment
but or him.

Nothing satisfies the fault finder
and no era has been free from his tantalizing presence. The faultfinders exasperated Moses on the mount until he dashed to pieces the stone tablets
inscribed with the first written laws
of God and man.

The faultfinder is the bane of the family circle. He undermines affection, destroys peace and breeds discontent. He is the fly in the ointment, the unwelcome intruder. He makes the task of the genuine reformer more difficult.

He blocks the path of progress. He cumbars the statutes with unnecessary and unworkable laws. He dictates destructive policies to those in authority and makes them cower before his vitriolic tongue, his poisonous pen and pestiferous persistence.
No church has been without its fault finder, no social organization; no shop, factory or office and no movement for the public good is exempt from his intrusion.

The faultfinder is found everywhere scattering the seeds of distrust, poisoning the minds of those who will listen, marshalling the forces of unreason, casting shadows on the sun, dimming the light of the stars, mocking the hopes of humanity and challenging the goodness of a beneficent Providence.

Out with the faultfinder! We have no room for him.—Leslies.

Fearing to break into a profession
that's overcrowded, some men waste
the best years of their lives looking for one that isn't.

Beauty is said to be only skin deep,
but many a woman's beauty depends upon the size of her balance in the bank.

Lots of men are lenient with themselves because of their belief that charity begins at home.

The mind cure may be all right—but the patient must have a mind of his own to start with.

The woman who makes fun of a new style one day is usually trying to imitate it the next.

A woman is always suspicious of another woman who dresses better than herself.

The man who hands out free advice to others always goes elsewhere for his own.

When a man says a bright thing he nearly always forgets the quotation marks.

A bathing suit that shrinks every time it is worn may not be immod-
est.
